

ARC Stones (DE/PA Boundary Markers) (see also Mason Dixon)

- (2) copies of Article “The Arc Stones of Kennett Township Chester County, PA. Includes stones 6, 6 ½ , 7, 7 ½, 8, 8 ½, 9, 9 ½ , 10, 10 ½.
- Dorothea Morse Letters.
- Kennett TWP Map showing markers 8-27-86.
- Color slides showing markers.
- Philadelphia Inquirer article 8-3-2000 “Behind the Line” Mason-Dixon Line Story.
- Copy of unknown book pages 8 – 21 on History of the Boundary dispute from 1700’s.
- News Journal Wilmington article Living on the Line with maps and story of creating states of confusion regarding the boundary dispute. 3-4-1990 (2 copies)
- Newsletter Chester County Historical Society Summer 1991 article on boundary dispute between PA and MD
- A picture of an arc stone and (2) maps of Boundaries involved in dispute
- Article unknown origin “Historic border marker back on the spot.
- Kennett Paper article 12-1987 by John Harty “Two r’s is human, but don’t put them in Burrows Run Road’ includes information on a walk to locate Arc Stones.
- Photos of Arc Stone #5 ½
- See more information on Arc Stones in KTHC maroon file/book on bookshelf
- Delaware Geological Survey brochure on Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey Boundaries. Information Series No. 6 June 1989
- The Land Conservancy Promotion Card from the Summer of 2011 with mention of Auburn Heights and Mason Dixon line running through the preserve.
- White Clay Creek Preserve Recreation Guide with reference to points in the preserve which contain monuments marking points along the Mason Dixon Line
- Write up of unknown origin about ARC stones. Missing pages.